Scope and Content Note

A veteran press officer in the foreign affairs field, Edward Savage came to the White House press office as a consultant on detail from the State Department. In December 1974 he was named assistant press secretary for foreign affairs, a position he held until his resignation in June 1975. In this capacity Savage met daily with press secretary Ron Nessen to discuss developments in foreign affairs and served as liaison with the foreign press. He worked closely with foreign embassies on details of visits by heads of their governments and in press arrangements when President Ford traveled abroad. Savage's resignation was due at least in part to his frustration over the National Security Council's refusal to allow him a more significant role in foreign policy news guidance.

The Savage files consist of correspondence, memoranda, press releases, transcripts of interviews and testimony, briefing guidance, briefing books, presidential press guidance, printed material, and clippings. These materials relate to various foreign policy issues, President Ford's trips abroad, visits of heads of foreign governments, and the operation of the White House press office. Open materials on presidential trips and visits of foreign leaders include correspondence and memoranda relating to arrangements for the press corps, press releases, public statements, briefing materials, and schedules. The bulk of the more substantive briefing materials, which concern Ford's meetings with foreign officials, are currently security classified and closed to research.
