Scope and Content Note

The Gerald R. Ford Congressional Papers were produced or accumulated by Ford and his staff during Ford's twenty-five years as a United States Representative from Michigan's Fifth Congressional District. The papers primarily document the information and constituent services provided by Ford, and his handling of legislative issues in the House. The largest portion dates from 1963, when the Ford office ceased disposing of most two year old materials from lack of storage space. The papers are arranged into sub-groups based largely on the original filing scheme of the Ford office.

The following sections summarize Gerald Ford's career in the house and the duties of his staff, and provide an overview of the papers and where related materials may be located.

Congressman Ford

Gerald R. Ford served Michigan's Fifth Congressional District in the House of Representatives from January 3, 1949 to December 6, 1973. The district comprised Kent and Ottawa Counties and, after redistricting in 1964, Kent and Ionia Counties. Redistricting in 1972 added portions of three adjacent Counties. Grand Rapids, a manufacturing center and the district's only large city, is surrounded by fruit, vegetable and dairy farmlands. Originally settled by Dutch and German immigrants, the Fifth District traditionally supports the Republican Party.

Ford was born July 14, 1913 in Omaha, Nebraska but was raised in Grand Rapids. He attended the University of Michigan and Yale University Law School before returning to Grand Rapids in 1941 to practice law with his friend, Philip Buchen. There he became associated with a group of Republicans, headed by W.B. "Doc" Ver Meulen, that challenged the local political organization of Republican party boss and mayor, Frank McKay. The Home Front, as the group called itself, sought to reform local politics by wresting power from the McKay machine. Although Ford enlisted in the United States Navy in 1942, he kept in touch with the increasingly successful Home Front organization.

Ford served 47 months on active duty, much of this time on the "USS Monterey." After the war he returned to Grand Rapids and joined the private law firm of Butterfield, Keeney and Amberg. He helped organize a veterans organization to deal with housing shortages and re-established contacts with the Home Front, which had succeeded during the war in gaining control of the Kent County Republican Committee.

With their backing and the tacit support of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Ford challenged incumbent Congressman Bartel J. Jonkman in the 1948 Republican primary. Jonkman's reelection bid was hampered by his isolationist position on foreign policy, local newspaper opposition and a special session of Congress that kept him in Washington that summer. Ford campaigned in support of the Marshall Plan and criticized Jonkman's record on veterans' affairs and local public works issues. With the encouragement of local labor organizations and the endorsement of both Grand Rapids newspapers, Ford defeated Jonkman in the September 15 primary and went on to win the general election on November 2. He continued to win reelection to the House without facing primary battles or serious challenges from Democratic opponents.

As a freshman member of the 81st Congress, Ford served on the Committee on Public Works, which reviewed legislation on federal construction projects. In 1951 he moved from Public Works into a newly vacated seat on the Committee on Appropriations, serving on the subcommittee which reviewed Defense Department appropriations.

In the House, Ford was a loyal Republican, who worked hard to build an expertise in appropriations matters. His own legislative initiatives consisted largely of public bills on matters of local or regional concern and private bills to aid individual constituents. He defined his career goal early, to become Speaker of the House, an opportunity that could only be achieved with long service and Republican success at the polls. As his responsibilities increased, Ford focused his legislative efforts primarily on national issues and, later, on Nixon administration programs.

During the Republican-controlled 83rd Congress, he served as Chairman of the Army Panel of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee. In 1953, he was appointed to the Foreign Operations Subcommittee, followed in 1956 by a seat on the special subcommittee which reviewed Central Intelligence Agency budget requests. From 1957 to 1958, Ford served on the select committee which drafted legislation creating the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Ford was one member of a small group of congressmen, dubbed the "Young Turks," who challenged the traditional House Republican leadership. In 1958 they supported Charles Halleck's successful bid for Minority Leader. Michigan Republicans sponsored Ford as a favorite-son candidate to balance the 1960 Republican Party ticket with old House colleague and long-term political ally Richard Nixon. In 1963, Republican members elected Ford to replace Charles Hoeven as Chairman of the House Republican Conference.

From December 1963 to September 1964, Ford served as one of seven members of the Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination of President John Kennedy and the murder of his alleged assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald. He was aided in this work by three assistants, one of whom, former campaign manager John R. Stiles, helped Ford write a book about the Commission's findings Portrait of the Assassin, after the final report was published.

In January 1965, in a revolt against incumbent Charles Halleck, Republican Members of Congress elected Ford Minority Leader, ending his committee service. His new duties included assigning committee posts, organizing Republican legislative strategies, and proposing Republican Party alternatives to Johnson administration foreign and domestic policies. He also increased his already extensive speaking and fund-raising efforts for congressional candidates. Until 1969 Ford joined Senator Everett Dirksen for periodic "Ev and Jerry Show" press conferences.

With Richard Nixon's 1969 inauguration, Ford's activities in behalf of the Republican Party continued. He supported and amplified administration legislative initiatives and traveled extensively. In 1970 he called for an investigation of Justice William O. Douglas' allegedly improper financial conduct as a member of the Supreme Court. Ford and fellow Congressman Hale Boggs traveled to the People's Republic of China in June 1972, four months after President Nixon's initial visit there.

In October 1973, with the Senate's Watergate investigation underway, Vice President Spiro Agnew resigned, minutes before entering a plea of nolo contendere before a Federal judge. On October 12 President Nixon selected Ford to be the 40th Vice President of the United States, initiating an investigation into his congressional career. Following extensive hearings, the Senate voted to confirm on November 22, with the House following suit on December 6. Chief Justice Warren Burger administered the oath of office before a joint session of Congress that evening.

Ford's Congressional Staff

During his early years in the House, Ford relied on a small staff of salaried assistants, volunteers, and interns in Washington and a part-time volunteer to run a district office in Grand Rapids. As his responsibilities increased, Ford added staff assistants, tapped the resources of committee staffs and opened a permanent district office in Grand Rapids, while continuing to make use of interns and volunteers.

After his 1948 electoral victory, Ford hired John P. Milanowski, a lawyer and former speech instructor, as administrative assistant. In 1950 Mildred Leonard began working for Ford. Milanowski and Leonard established a file system, drafted Ford's correspondence with constituents and fellow Members of Congress, and directed routine daily operations. Milanowski helped draft press releases, newsletters, legislation and speeches, advised Ford on legislative strategy and helped him with his committee work. In addition to her initial administrative duties, Leonard answered Ford's personal correspondence and arranged his travel and speaking schedule. She remained on Ford's staff throughout his congressional career. Milanowski resigned in January 1955 to resume his private law practice in Grand Rapids and help organize a permanent district office. Frank Meyer, a high school teacher from Grand Haven, replaced him as administrative assistant.

Until Milanowski became district representative, a volunteer-staffed home office served constituents and assisted Ford when he was in the area. After 1955 the district office assumed some of the constituent caseload, scheduled appointments during Ford's home visits, and represented him at local functions. The office also prepared routine press releases and managed the details of service academy appointments. Milanowski resigned this position in January 1969 to become United States Attorney for the Western District of Michigan. Gordon Vander Till replaced him.

With his election as House Minority Leader, Ford increased his staff. Josephine Wilson, in the office of the Minority Leader since 1956, assisted Ford with duties directly related to that position. These included coordinating Republican committee assignments and appointments to special boards and commissions, and providing assistance to Republican-appointed employees of the House. Wilson remained on the staff throughout Ford's congressional career, and then joined the vice presidential office.

In 1965 Ford hired James R. Mudge of the Detroit Free Press to serve as press secretary, but a year later Paul Miltich, a reporter for Booth newspapers in Michigan, replaced him. Miltich prepared newsletters and statements, briefed Ford prior to fundraising and business trips and assisted him in drafting speeches. Prior to this time Ford's friend John Stiles or his administrative assistant had similar responsibilities.

Robert Hartmann, a former newspaperman from Los Angeles, joined Ford's staff in 1969 after serving as editor for the Republican Policy Committee. He advised Ford on general political issues, drafted correspondence on relatively sensitive political matters, and helped Ford or other staff members draft speeches and statements for Ford's use. He and Washington lawyer Benton Becker also coordinated Ford's investigation of Justice Douglas and gathered information for use during Ford's vice presidential confirmation hearings. Hartmann served him for the remainder of Ford's tenure in public office. Following Frank Meyer's death in 1972, Mildred Leonard became administrative assistant. At that time, Dorothy Downton, who had joined the secretarial staff in 1967, assumed some of Leonard's previous duties. Both aides remained on Ford's staff after he became Vice President and President.

Following Ford's confirmation as Vice President on December 6, 1973, Vander Till organized an interim office with staff in Washington and Grand Rapids. Intended to provide constituent service until the election of Ford's successor, the Washington interim office closed in February 1974, while a small Grand Rapids office remained in place until the following December.

Ford's Congressional Papers

These material were produced or accumulated by Congressman Ford and his staff or sent to his office by government officials, constituents and the public. Until 1963 his staff routinely destroyed most of his papers every two years for lack of storage space. Included were virtually all general constituent correspondence and general information on legislative issues, and all or parts of other files determined to be of minimal administrative value. Information on particular long-term constituent and legislative problems was preserved in a special file, as were certain files of more permanent reference value. As a result of these practices, the papers principally document Ford's official activities and interests, the duties of his staff and the concerns of his constituents after 1963. There are major exceptions, however, especially concerning Ford's public statements and legislative initiatives.

In 1964 the Michigan Historical Collections (MHC) at the University of Michigan sought and obtained a deposit agreement for Ford's congressional materials. Beginning in January 1965, these materials were periodically shipped to MHC for archival processing. None of the material, however, was made available for historical research pending further negotiations with Ford, who retained in his custody an additional quantity of files dating to 1949 as well as his active files. When Ford became Vice President and then President, these materials remained in Washington, DC.

On December 13, 1976, President Ford offered to the United States for deposit in a presidential library in Ann Arbor, Michigan, all of his presidential, vice presidential and congressional materials including those previously deposited with MHC. Ford's offer was accepted by the University of Michigan and the National Archives and Records Service. The MHC files were transferred into Ford Library custody in 1977, joining those congressional files which had been retained by Ford. All were then archivally processed under terms of the Ford letter of gift.

The Ford congressional papers are typical of those of many congressmen. Eighty percent of these files consist of general information on legislative issues and routine correspondence documenting the concerns of those constituents and others who needed Ford's help or wanted him to be aware of their views. This portion may be larger and more varied than similar collections mainly because Ford's role as Minority Leader gave him more visibility and broadened his range of interests.

The remainder of the files is particularly strong in documenting Ford's activity in drafting and voting on legislation throughout his congressional career; his 1948-73 speeches, newsletters and other public statement; his service on the Warren Commission; and his activities on behalf of Republican candidates for public office and his own reelection campaigns.

Given the fragmentary nature of some of the pre-1963 material, the papers contain very little material on Ford's work on congressional committees. The papers do not directly document Ford's personal activities as Minority Leader, such as dealing with colleagues and lobby groups, maneuvering for votes, and encouraging party cohesiveness. Materials on these and similar activities, which more often occurred face-to-face rather than on paper, are only scattered throughout the files.

For filing purposes, October 12, 1973, the date President Nixon nominated Ford as Vice President, was chosen by Ford's congressional staff as the end of the congressional period. Materials accumulated after this date were generally placed with the vice presidential papers, although some materials concerning office administration and correspondence on the Warren Commission were filed with the congressional papers.

Current arrangement reflects as nearly as can be determined the original organization. Most sub-groups established during processing at MHC were maintained, with some changes and additions by Ford Library staff to accommodate new materials. Arrangement within each sub-group reflects original organization to varying degrees, depending primarily upon the care with which the original file scheme had been conceived and maintained by the Ford office.

During processing at the Ford Library, stationery stocks, duplicate materials, and occasional series determined to be of no historical value, such as an unarranged body of crank mail known to the Ford office as "Fan Mail," were disposed of.

Related Materials (January 2011)

The holdings of the Ford Library include various groups of materials which complement the congressional papers. The papers of Robert Hartmann, long-time Ford aide include around thirty feet of files covering his work on the Ford staff, 1966-73. The Ford vice presidential papers overlap the congressional period in scope and content, particularly those dated in 1973. A set of scrapbooks spanning Ford's entire career in public office is maintained as a separate collection. Large quantities of books and other printed materials, museum objects and audiovisual materials, including still photographs, were transferred from the congressional papers to appropriate units within the Ford Library and Museum.

Transcripts from an oral history project focussing on Gerald Ford's early years including the 1948 campaign are available for research. The Grand Rapids Press for certain years of the congressional period is available on microfilm at the Ford Library. A vertical file of clippings, pamphlets and other miscellaneous material on Ford's career is also available.

The Michigan Historical Collections also maintains manuscript, audiovisual, and printed materials containing information on Gerald Ford and his career in public office. Included are the papers of Doc Ver Meulen, Paul Goebel, John Martin and Dorothy Judd, who were active on the Home Front in Kent County. Also on deposit are the papers John Stiles used in drafting Portrait of the Assassin, materials on Ford's Michigan colleagues in the House and Senate, and materials on national and Michigan political issues. Further information on these materials is available from the Director, Bentley Historical Library, University of Michigan, 1150 Beal Avenue, Ann Arbor, MI 48109.

Container List

General and Case File, 1963-73. (Boxes A1-A190, 190 linear feet)

The General and Case File consists of routine correspondence concerning Gerald Ford's Congressional and political activities. Ford's political activities are reflected in large files on the Republican Party, both national and local, containing correspondence with party officials, material relating to GRF's service on various party committees, fund-raising plans, state and county party directories, and public committees on Republican candidates and policies. Files relating to Ford's campaign for reelection, however, are located in the Campaign File series. The General and Case Files also include his schedules, radio and TV appearances; invitations; requests for speeches, photographs, flags, government publications, and other materials; and letters of congratulations and condolences to constituents. The bulk of the file, however, concerns efforts to help constituents with their problems with the Federal Government on such matters as social security, veterans benefits, income taxes, Medicare payments, small business loans, the draft, military assignments, immigration, even the adoption of foreign orphans. Similar case file material is located in Special Files but appears to deal with cases of unusual complexity or duration.

The General and Case File dates from 1963. Prior to 1964 when they were solicited by the Bentley Library, Ford's papers were destroyed as they became two years old because of lack of storage space. This series contains correspondence, telegrams, memoranda, resumes, legal documents, manuals, notes, invitations, appointment books, form letters, printed materials, and clippings. The file is arranged by year and thereunder alphabetically by subject. Within each folder, documents are arranged either chronologically or alphabetically by name or correspondent or subject. Most case file correspondence from individual constituents is filed by name under headings A-Miscellaneous, B-Miscellaneous, etc. Other case file letters are filed topically under such headings as "Social Security", "Veterans Administration", or "Welfare" but these files will also contain general comments on the subject in addition to the case letters.

Legislative File, 1963-73. (Boxes B1-B262, 262 linear feet)

The Legislative File, also known as the Issues File, consists of routine letters, postcards, telegrams, newspaper clippings, press releases, and publications concerning Congressional legislation and public issues. This file does not contain material on bills introduced by Gerald R. Ford; that material appears in the Bills and Voting Record File.

The bulk of the correspondence is with constituents concerning their views on issues and legislation. In some cases incoming mail is the product of organized campaigns by pressure groups with the files yielding many form cards and letters. Considerably smaller amounts of correspondence are between Ford and his colleagues concerning hearings, proposed amendments, and other legislative activity; and between Ford and lobbyists or officers of organizations and companies which had interests at stake in certain bills.

This file reveals Ford's views over time on such issues as agriculture, civil rights, defense, foreign affairs, taxes and the war in Vietnam. Further significance of this file lies in showing public opinion on these issues. The file also includes material relating to Ford's trip to the People Republic of China in 1972, and Republican leadership State of the Union addresses from 1966 to 1968.

All arranged by year and thereunder alphabetically by issue with correspondence for each issue arranged chronologically by month. Following the correspondence for most issues are folders of published background information and unanswered correspondence. For issues on which Ford received a large volume of mail there are folders of letters answered only by form response. Individually answered letters are indexed by the Control File.

The Legislative File for the years before 1963 was destroyed by the Ford staff before he began depositing his papers at the Bentley Historical Library in 1965. All of this file was sent to the Bentley Library between 1965 and 1974 and transferred to the Ford Library in September 1977.

Press Secretary and Speech File, 1948-73. (Boxes D1-D119, 47.6 linear feet)

This file illustrates the public relations activities of Congressman Ford, especially as evidenced in his speeches, newsletters, press statements, magazine articles, interviews, and local radio broadcasts. The file likewise documents the functions of a press secretary in the preparation and distribution of such material and in related work.

GRF did not hire a press secretary until February 1965, shortly after becoming House Minority Leader. Prior to that time, responsibility for press relations and public statements was shared by GRF and his small staff, notably administrative assistant Frank Meyer. The first press secretary was James M. Mudge, formerly of the Grand Rapids Herald editorial staff 1949-59, and Grand Rapids bureau chief for the Detroit Free Press 1959-65. Mudge remained with Ford only until March 1966, leaving to become city-county bureau chief of the Detroit Free Press. In November 1967, Mudge became press secretary to US Congressman Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan.

Paul Miltich succeeded Mudge and continued to serve Ford until March 1975, when he resigned as the President's Assistant Press Secretary. Miltich had been a reporter-assistant city editor for the Saginaw News, 1946-57, and Washington correspondent for Booth newspapers of Michigan, 1957-66.

This file was created by combining the press secretary's files, which perforce dated only from 1965, with an older and overlapping collection of similar material dating from 1947. The character of much of this combined file is that of a reference file of Ford public statements. Although drafts, background material and related material are commonly interspersed, they are fragmentary in nature. Because of vagaries in the file system, those in search of particular items are advised to consult various series.

Warren Commission File, 1963-76. (Boxes E1-E42, 16.8 linear feet)

On November 29, 1963, President Lyndon Johnson signed Executive Order 11130 appointing a commission of seven, including Congressman Ford, to investigate the deaths of President John F. Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald. From December 1963 to September 1964, the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy (Warren Commission) and its 26 member staff met in executive session and received sworn testimony from over 500 witnesses and experts. In September 1964, the Commission published both a final report and 26 volumes of hearings and selected evidence, ultimately depositing all accumulated evidence, exhibits and other records in the National Archives as Record Group 272 for storage and eventual release to the public.

To enable him to carry out his duties and to maintain a certain degree of autonomy from the Commission, Ford hired three consultants. Francis X. Fallon, a law student at Harvard and later attorney in Grand Rapids, John H. Ray, Former Congressman from New York, and John R. Stiles, former Ford campaign manager and close personal friend, had the same access to depositions, testimony and supporting materials as the staff of the Commission. This trio advised Ford on the particulars of cross-examination, reviewed and condensed testimony, posed questions for future witnesses, and offered their prepared responses to correspondence from the public on the Warren Commission. Jack Stiles continued to handle queries for the remainder of Ford's Congressional career.

Following the publication of the Report, Stiles and Ford collaborated on a book, titled Portrait of the Assassin, summarizing the Commission's investigation of Oswald's personality. The materials Stiles used to draft the book are located in the Bentley Library. GRF also published articles in Life magazine and California Magazine recounting his experiences on the Commission.

This collection consists primarily of copies of exhibits, reports, proceedings and depositions sent to Ford for his use during the Commission's investigation. The original texts, along with extensive supporting materials are part of NARA Record Group 272. Other materials are unique, including personal notes and drafts, correspondence and Ford's writings about the work of the Commission.

The collection was assembled from scattered segments accumulated by Congressman Ford's office and forwarded to the Bentley Library. Large segments were sent in July 1967 and April 1971, along with yearly installments of related correspondence, articles and other papers originally placed in the "Legislative" series of the Congressional papers. During processing at the Ford Library, additional material, dated 1972-76, was added from the "Special Files" Congressional series. Current arrangement is based on the Bentley Library arrangement with minor changes.

Compiled by Paul Conway, October 1978

Described below are the series comprising Sub-Group E:

Papers Concerning the Work of the Warren Commission, 1963-64. (Boxes E1-E4, 1.6 linear feet)

Commission Exhibits, Commission Documents and other materials received by GRF; memoranda, notes, clippings, correspondence and other papers accumulated by or produced by GRF in connection with his service on the Commission. The numbered Commission Exhibits published in the 26 volumes of evidence, Commission Documents produced by Federal agencies assisting the Commission, meeting agenda and other records accumulated by the Commission are duplicates of materials in NARA Record Group 272. The remaining material, much of it handwritten and unique to this file, generally relates to Ford's efforts to organize the various strands of testimony and efforts by his consultants to condense the testimony of witnesses, monitor the progress of the Commission and criticize drafts of the final report. Although the series appears to be a complete collection during his service, it does not fully record Ford's activities on the Commission nor detail his participation in the decision-making process. The material is arranged in two consecutive sequences: (1) miscellaneous papers in chronological order, (2) groups of records arranged alphabetically by subject.

Warren Commission Proceedings, 1964. (Boxes E5-E13, 3.6 linear feet)
Ford's copies of transcripts of executive sessions of the commissioners and testimony of principal witnesses before a quorum of Commissioners and the General Counsel. Included are open sessions of the Commission during which testimony of Mark Lane, attorney for Lee Harvey Oswald's mother was heard (March 4 and July 2), and transcripts of executive sessions of January 21 (volume 4), February 24 (volume 16), March 16 (volume 24B), April 30 (volume 40), May 19 (volume 45), June 4 (volume 46), and June 23 (volume 55). The remainder are closed sessions of testimony. Volumes 1-3,5,6 and 57 were not received by the Ford Library. Some volumes contain passages highlighted by Stiles and Ray for use in advising GRF or documenting passages in Portrait of the Assassin. Name indexes, including one prepared at the Bentley Library, are placed at the beginning of the series. Transcripts of testimony and executive session are numbered consecutively and arranged chronologically by date of the proceeding.

Warren Commission Depositions, 1964. (Boxes E14-E32, 7.6 linear feet)
Ford's copies of transcripts of sworn testimony delivered before staff members of the Commission, usually in Dallas or New Orleans, but also in San Francisco and Washington, D.C., among other cities. Most witnesses were of secondary concern to the investigation, but occasionally follow-up interviews or testimony in connection with the proceedings were recorded. Some volumes were marked in pencil by Stiles or Ford and some handwritten notes were attached, apparently in connection with the writing of Portrait of the Assassin. The notes highlight information emphasized in the book or discrepancies between testimony printed in these copies and the same testimony published in the 26 volume Hearings. Name indexes, including one prepared at the Bentley Library, are placed at the beginning of the series. Arranged numerically by volume number.

Bills and Voting Record File, 1949-73. (Boxes F1-F29, 11.6 linear feet)

Administrative Assistant John Milanowski, who assisted Gerald Ford in his first congressional campaign, maintained case files and lists of bills and resolutions sponsored by Ford from 1949. Frank Meyer, who succeeded Milanowski in 1957, expanded the collection by including files of bills and resolutions that GRF co-sponsored. These case files document Ford's concern for the private relief of individual constituents and public legislation on behalf of a variety of interests. Examples of the latter are public works, tax and tariff reform measures of local interest, and Great Lakes development and agricultural reform measures of primarily regional concern. As Minority Leader, Ford more frequently introduced legislation of national import, such as the 18 year old vote, pollution, health and safety measures, and voting rights guarantees. After Richard Nixon's inauguration as President in 1969, Ford additionally sponsored legislation in support of administration policies.

The case files are complete or nearly so for bills sponsored from 1949 or co-sponsored from 1957; and for resolutions sponsored from 1949 or co-sponsored from 1969, (with the exception of an unexplained gap 1959-62). Type and quality of case file documentation varies but often include: urgings of constituents and others, bill or resolution texts, comments from federal agencies and departments, and supporting information on the purported necessity or effect of the measure. Documentation is generally sparse, however, for legislation introduced solely for the record in support of Nixon administration policies.

Milanowski and Meyer also accumulated information on Ford's voting record in Congress and miscellaneous reference materials related to House legislative activities, 1951-73. During archival processing personalized voting record digests, provided Ford by the Clerk of the House, were added to these materials.

The second set, spanning the 81st-93rd Congresses (1949-73) but with the 84th Congress (1955-1956) missing, simply indicates date of enrollment and title of measure.

Campaign Files, 1948-74. (Boxes G1-G37, 14.8 linear feet)

Materials relating to Gerald R. Ford's thirteen biennial congressional campaigns from 1948 through 1972 were maintained as a separate file. Because of the need to consult these materials in succeeding campaigns, campaign files were saved when other files were discarded. Although there is little surviving material from the first few campaigns, by 1956 the files are fairly complete and representative of those of later years.

The campaign files include the following series: Campaign Series, 1948-74; Voting Statistics, 1920-72; Michigan Redistricting, 1961-64; General Voting Information, 1952-72; and the Mobile Office File, 1955-73. The mobile office, used for annual tours of the Fifth District, was an innovative method used by Congressman Ford to more effectively reach and serve his constituents.

Approximately three linear feet of early campaign material had been previously turned over to the Bentley Library, where it was arranged and placed in new folders. This material was turned over to the Gerald R. Ford Library, and accessioned on September 12, 1977. Additional campaign files arrived at NLF in January 1977 with the bulk of historical materials donated to the United States by President Gerald R. Ford. The papers arriving from Washington were contained in manila envelopes. Although the envelopes were often labeled and grouped roughly by campaign year, there was little over-all arrangement, and none within the envelopes. Whenever possible, the file designations devised by the Ford staff have been retained, despite inconsistencies from year to year, usually with no obvious explanation. Several categories which might be expected to contain large quantities of material, such as chron files and schedules, rarely include more than a few items.

Although much of this material is repetitious and low-level in nature, the files are of value in documenting Ford's many successful congressional campaigns and his relationships with loyal constituents who supported him with their time and financial contributions year after year. It is also interesting to note the increasing sophistication and expense of political campaigns as evidenced by the files. In the 1948 campaign Ford's largest single expenditure was for postage stamps. Later campaigns show extensive use of expensive television time and added emphasis on marketing the candidate's "image" through use of advertising techniques. Several campaign years are of special interest, such as the 1960 Ford for Vice-President drive. Although there was no significant impact on Ford's winning vote percentages, correspondence in 1970-72 reflects the growing peace movement and disaffection with the Republican Administration. The 1970 files also contain material concerning the controversial James R. Polk article on Ford's alleged failure to report all campaign contributions.

Less than 1% of this file has been closed under donor restrictions. A large quantity of campaign memorabilia has been turned over to the Gerald R. Ford Museum collection; campaign tapes and photographs have been turned over to the audio-visual collection. Approximately one linear foot of material (duplicates, catalogues, and miscellaneous samples of campaign hand-outs) has been removed from the collection for disposal.

Committee File, 1948-65. (Boxes H1-H8, 3.2 linear feet)

GRF served on the Committee on Public Works, which reviewed legislation on federal construction projects from 1949 to 1950. Beginning in 1951 and continuing until his election as Minority Leader in 1965 ended his committee service, GRF served on the Committee on Appropriations. Because of the complexity and scope of the committee's work, it was compartmentalized into subcommittees paralleling the structure of the executive branch. Each subcommittee reviewed budget requests from a federal agency or department and prepared appropriations bills and reports, which were submitted to the full committee for approval.

Subcommittee members also organized and led the debate on the House floor until the bill was passed. In 1951 and 1952, GRF served on the Deficiencies and Civil Functions Subcommittee (Army) and the General and Temporary Subcommittee (Korean Emergency Agencies). He was appointed in 1953 to serve on the Foreign Operations Subcommittee, and on the Department of Defense Subcommittee as Chairman of the Army section during the Republican congress and as ranking minority member thereafter. In 1956, he was given additional responsibility as one of five Congressmen who reviewed the budget requests of the Central Intelligence Agency. From 1957 to 1958, GRF served on the Select Committee on Astronautics and Space Exploration that drafted legislation creating NASA.

Administrative assistant John Milanowski organized a file in 1949 to contain all material relating to GRF's committee service. He and his successor, Frank Meyer, continued accumulating committee-related material for each successive Congress, apparently destroying older material as they judged it obsolete. It was the general practice of the Ford staff to dispose of most records after two years. Some portions of the formerly complete record survived, were transferred to the Bentley Library and given a preliminary arrangement.

The Committee File contains correspondence on the Public Works Committee, correspondence on GRF's service with the Appropriations Committee from 1952 to 1954 and subcommittee prints, correspondence and related papers from his work with the Defense and Foreign Operations Subcommittees of the Appropriations Committee from 1959 to 1965. By nature of its fragmented condition, the collection is of limited research value. Correspondence on both committees mainly reflects support or criticism of a particular Ford position rather than his specific activities. Other subcommittee material consists primarily of circulars and memoranda sent to all subcommittee members and is not consistent in its documentation of GRF's work.

No materials from Ford's service on the Select Committee on Astronautics and Space Exploration survived, save for bound volumes of hearings and reports located in the Library book collection. No papers from the Civil Functions, the General and Temporary, or the CIA Subcommittees survived. Some correspondence, dating from 1963, on general appropriations matters may be found in the Legislative File.

Josephine E. Wilson served on the staff of the House Minority Leader as a legislative assistant from 1956 to 1973, under Joseph W. Martin, Charles A. Halleck, and Gerald R. Ford. In 1973, Ms. Wilson moved to the Office of the Vice President as legislative secretary in charge of monitoring House activities.

The files herein described reflect three principal duties assigned Ms. Wilson as legislative assistant, 1965-73:

1. Clerk of the Republican Committee on Committees, which made all committee assignments of House Republicans;
2. Administrative assistant relating to the appointment of Republican Congressmen to special boards, committees, and commissions and international study groups;

3. Assistant with clerical and administrative duties relating to Republican-appointed employees of the House.

Material concerning Wilson's duties in the Office of the Vice President will be found in the files of Walter Mote, Assistant to the President of the Senate, in the Ford Vice Presidential Papers.

Special Files, 1948-73. (Boxes J1-J34, 13.6 linear feet)

Special Files appear to be files maintained on topics of particular concern to Ford professionally and personally. Included are correspondence from the major industries, local governments, and colleges in the district about their problems and Ford's efforts to help them. There are also individual case files similar to those in the General and Case File but those in Special Files seem to concern problems of unusual complexity or duration. Many of the topics are subjects related to the welfare of the Fifth District such as Grand Rive Flood Control, the Great Lakes, or Poverty in the Fifth District. Other subjects reflect Ford's more personal concerns and activities such as selecting and mailing Christmas cards or furnishing his Grand Rapids office. Correspondence from personal friends is also included in Special Files. Because of Ford's continuing interest in these subjects, most of the files in Special Files span several years. Unlike the General and Case Files, which until 1964 were destroyed after two years because of lack of storage space, Special Files were retained indefinitely, although there is very little Special Files material from the period prior to the mid-1950's.

The files contain correspondence, handwritten notes, draft letters, memoranda, reports, surveys, minutes, charts, bills and receipts, lists, newsletters, newspaper clippings, Congressional documents, printed material, and photographs. Arranged alphabetically by subject and thereunder chronologically.

Fifth District Post Office File, 1949-73. (Boxes K1-K9, 3.6 linear feet)

Correspondence and memoranda relating to appointments, job endorsements, maintenance, repair, and construction of buildings, and complaints about service, all in the Fifth Congressional District. Much of the file relates to the appointments of post office personnel. Generally GRF assumed a substantial role in appointments, an activity he shared with local party organizations. For post office appointments in Ottawa and Ionia Counties, GRF solicited the advice of the county GOP executive committee. In Kent, he received recommendations from a Post Office Advisory Committee, chaired by John R. Stiles.

The Kent County file runs from 1949 to 1973, the Ottawa County file begins in 1949 and terminates in 1964, the year Ottawa County was transferred to the Ninth Congressional District. Material relating to Ionia County runs from 1965-1973. An earlier Ionia County file, (1953-1964), from this series is on loan to the Bentley Historical Library. This file, 0.5 linear feet, does not contain information on GRF, but it does relate to Congressman Alvin Bentley, whose archival collection is among the holdings of the Bentley Library. Series arranged by county, thereunder by town or village and thereunder chronologically.

Grand Rapids Office File, 1960-74. (Boxes L1-L9, 3.6 linear feet)

The Grand Rapids staff assumed much of the constituent caseload as well as providing assistance to the Washington Office. Additionally, the Grand Rapids district office handled scheduling for GRF's home visits, represented the Congressman at local functions, prepared routine press releases, and managed the details of scholarship programs and service academy appointments.

The records do not reveal if GRF had a district office before July 1, 1950, but after that date he did maintain an office, first in the old Grand Rapids Federal Building and, successively, in the Michigan Trust Building, 1954-60; at 425 Cherry Street, 1960-73; and finally, in the new Federal Building.

John Milanowski, administrative assistant from 1949 to 1955, returned to Grand Rapids in 1955 serving as district representative until 1969. His successor was Gordon Vander Till who remained until 1974. (The records are incomplete, but there is no evidence of a paid district representative before Milanowski.

When GRF was confirmed as vice president on December 6, 1973, an interim office with staff in Washington and Grand Rapids was organized under Vander Till. The intention was to provide constituent service until the election of Ford's successor. The Washington interim office closed in the spring of 1974, while the Grand Rapids staff remained in place until the following December.

These files are judged marginal for research on issues and legislation but ought to be useful for following the day-by-day constituent obligations of a congressman. This series was received by the Bentley Library on deposit in two installments; the first, consisting of 1962-69 material, was removed from Washington on November 6, 1974; the second was transferred from Grand Rapids during February 1975. All files were transferred to National Archives custody in September 1977.

Washington Office File, 1949-74. (Boxes M1-M73, 24.4 linear feet)

This is a collection of sixteen small series or file fragments formerly maintained by Ford's Washington office but otherwise unrelated. These series relate to Ford's official activities, the administration of his office, his personal finances, his participation in various organizations, and other personal matters. Many of the series are routine in nature.

Congressman Ford's Washington office handled most of his scheduling, speechwriting, press relations, correspondence, and constituent casework. Before Ford was elected Minority Leader in 1965 his Washington staff consisted of an administrative assistant and two or three secretaries. After 1965 the staff grew to about a dozen persons with the addition of a press secretary, two legislative assistants, and several more secretaries.

All files which comprise the Ford Congressional Papers were maintained by this Washington staff with the exception of the Grand Rapids Office File. Approximately one-third of the Washington Office File was deposited at the Bentley Historical Library between 1965 and 1974. The remainder was kept in Washington and received by the Ford Library along with the Ford Presidential Papers on January 20, 1977.

Compiled by William McNitt, July 1979.

Described below are the series comprising Sub-Group M:

The trip file contains information on travel and contractual arrangements, correspondence concerning appearances, program planning, reference materials, and trip expenses. The Trip File is arranged in strict chronological order and included GRF appearances at political rallies and fundraisers, parades, fairs, symposia, dedications and other civic occasions, and association meetings.

Although most file folders contain documents relating to a single trip, some folders may combine several stops, this is especially true of home trips. The Trip File was not maintained as a separate file series until 1966. Some trip material for earlier years may be found scattered throughout the General and Case File.

Compiled by Christine Ferretti, March 1979.

Invitations File, 1962-73. (Boxes O1-O63, 25.2 linear feet)

Invitations, cards, letters, occasional responses, and related materials dealing with invitations from foreign dignitaries, the military, legislators, and various political organizations and local groups, all wishing to meet Ford or have him appear at their particular event. Events include numerous ship launchings and keel-layings, charity events, prayer meetings, political meetings, rallies and fundraisers, golf outings, testimonials, civic events and graduation commencements. The material is arranged chronologically by month of item and is unarranged.

The material was maintained by Mildred Leonard, who served as Ford's Executive Secretary and later as Administrative assistant. Ford made the final decision on whether to accept or regret an invitation. Consequently, much of the material contains notes in Ford's own handwriting. Only about 20% of the invitations in this file required a personal response from Ford and a carbon copy of the response is attached to the correspondence. There are very few cross references to this file in either the General File of the Control File.

The Invitations File was not maintained before 1962, as the Ford staff did not keep this type of material prior to that year. The files contain both acceptances and regrets. In 1965 only, a separate so-called "appearances" series was created for invitations dealing with Republican Party related events. After 1965, material of this nature was incorporated into the Trip File, although some accepted out-of-town invitations were kept in the Invitations File.

Compiled by Kenneth Hafeli, September 1979.

Service Academy Appointment File, 1958-74. (Boxes P1-P18, 7.2 linear feet)

This file concerns the selection of Fifth Congressional District high school students for appointment to the nation's five service academies (Army, Navy, Air Force, Merchant Marine, and Coast Guard). In making these appointments Ford relied solely on the results of the Civil Service Designation Exam to compile a ranking of candidates. He then submitted lists of nominees and alternates. The nominees had to pass further scholastic and physical examinations given by the academies before finally obtaining the appointment. Later the academies reported regularly to Ford on the academic progress of his appointees.

This collection documents the procedures used by the Ford staff, the background and test scores of each applicant, and the academic records of Ford appointees. Virtually all of the material is routine in nature and is cross-referenced in the Control File. During most of the period covered by this file, the work was handled by Ford aide Ruth Kilmer.

Although some earlier materials were not disposed by the Ford staff, this file is complete only from 1962 to 1974. The file was deposited at the Bentley Historical Library between 1965 and 1974 and was transferred to the Ford Library in September 1977.

Compiled by William McNitt, July 1979.

Printed Materials, 1947-73. (231 linear feet)

When Gerald Ford donated his congressional papers to the Library, he included a large collection of published materials which supplements those papers. Included are congressional publications (especially those relating to committees on which he served), compilations of laws and regulations, reports of government commissions, publications concerning state government in Michigan, Republican Party publications, 5th Congressional District directories, and routine publications distributed to constituents.

While covering Ford's entire congressional career, this collection is especially strong for the years before he became Minority Leader in 1965. Such publications as the "Congressional Record" (1949-1973) and the volumes of committee hearings and reports concerning his work on the Public Works Committee (1949-50), Appropriations Committee (1951-64), and the Select Committee on Astronautics and Space Exploration (1958-59) will help researchers to fill in gaps in the Ford papers for the early years of his congressional career.

Robert T. Hartmann Files, 1965-73. (Boxes R1-R34, 13.6 linear feet)

Robert Hartmann assisted House Republicans, 1966-69, as editor of the House Republican Conference and Minority Sergeant-at-Arms. He then served Ford as Legislative Assistant to the Minority Leader, chief of staff to the Vice President, and Counsellor to the President. To these posts he brought his years of experience with the Los Angeles Times and, more briefly, as information officer with the Navy 1941-45 and the Food and Agriculture Organization 1964-65.

In his 1980 memoir Palace Politics (p.45) Hartmann described his duties for Congressman Ford:

"I was responsible for almost everything unrelated to Ford's role as Representative of the Fifth District of Michigan. I did the staff work connected with his role as Minority Leader. When the House was in session I was usually within beckoning range, sometimes acted as lookout when he was off the floor. I carried confidential messages to and from other Republican members and their aides, with my Democratic counterparts in the Speaker's and Majority Leader's offices. People got to me when they couldn't get to Ford, or didn't want to bother him, to relay their concerns...

I was go-between with the Senate leadership, the Republican National Committee, Governors' Association and Congressional campaign staffs. When Nixon was nominated I was at Permanent Chairman Ford's side on the convention podium. I represented him in Inaugural arrangements and became his liaison with White House and Executive departments. I pushed Ford's requests and helped Nixon's lobbyists - Harlow, Timmons and others - push Administration programs in the House."

Hartmann's files document his diverse duties, but in an uneven and fragmentary fashion. Relatively little material reflects his duties as House Republican Conference editor or Minority Sergeant-at-Arms. Of his work on Ford's staff, some subject areas are better documented than others, most notably the investigation of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas. In contrast the subject file is primarily from 1973 and the chronological correspondence file largely omits 1970.

Hartmann kept these files until the end of the Ford presidency. He then relinquished this material, along with his vice presidential and White House files, to the Ford Library under the Ford deed of gift. Hartmann also donated a collection of his personal papers to the Ford Library in 1992.

Described below are the series comprising Sub-Group R:

Appointments and Job File, 1969-73. (Boxes R1-R6, 2.5 linear feet)

Many items were annotated by Ford. Arranged alphabetically by name of job candidate, boxes 1-5. Additional material arranged by subject in box 6.
