RONALD REAGAN ON HIS PERSONAL FINANCES

During my last year as Governor, California law provided for public filing of Statements of Economic Interests. On January 30, 1975, I filed such a Statement covering the period April 1, 1974 through January 6, 1975, the conclusion of my second term as Governor.

That Statement is substantially correct today, except that I no longer have any interests in the Yearling Row Ranch or the Reagan Cattle Co..

My last tax returns for the five years 1970 through 1974 show federal and state income taxes and local property taxes totaling $130,788.00, an average $26,157.00 per year. My salary as Governor during those years totaled $240,460.00, an average of $48,092.00.

Since leaving office, I have placed such assets as I have in a blind trust. The trust will continue at least for the duration of the time I am a candidate and under its terms I can neither inquire of the trustees' action, nor can they inform me of their actions. The trustees may deal with these assets as they see fit without my permission. The trustees are Justin Dart, William French Smith and William Wilson.

SAMPLE STATEMENT

John Q. Smith is a candidate for Governor of California. He files his nomination papers on March 1, 1974, and his Statement of Economic Interests will cover the period from March 1, 1973, through February 28, 1974. (See Secretary of State's information manual, section V.) After studying the information manual, Smith concludes that his economic interests which he is required to disclose are as follows:

1. He is employed by General Widgets, Inc., a company located in Los Angeles, and has received $20,000 in salary during the period. (See samples of Schedules 716-C and 716-D.)
2. He also owns $30,000 worth of stock in General Widgets, Inc., and has received dividends of $2,000 during the period. (See samples of Schedules 716-A and 716-C.)
3. He owned an interest in an office building in Sacramento, but he sold his entire interest in the property for $15,000 on July 1, 1973. (See sample of Schedule 716-B.)
4. He received an original painting from John Doe, a friend of his who is an artist, as a Christmas present. The painting is worth $500. (See sample of Schedule 716-C.)

Smith files Form 716 on March 1, 1974, the same date that he files his nomination papers. On page 1 he states his full name on line 1, writes "Governor" on line 2 and checks the box indicating it is a state office. He checks the second box in line 3, indicating he is filing Form 716 as a candidate, and he fills in the dates March 1, 1973 and February 28, 1974 on line 4. He signs his name and indicates the date and place of his signature. He fills out the schedules on pages 2 and 3 as follows:

Reagan steps up attack on Ford

By Curtis J. Sitomer
Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Los Angeles
Sharpened attacks by Ronald Reagan on President Ford here raise doubt about the prospects of Republican Party unity after the August convention, according to expert observers.

The former California Governor now is taking aim at Mr. Ford for "a developing pattern of secrecy" in foreign policy. Mr. Reagan sharply criticizes the President and his administration for alleged "secret negotiations" with Fidel Castro's Cuba, with Hanoi (in trying to normalize relations), and over the Panama Canal.

Up to recently, Mr. Reagan's attacks on the administration were broadly couched and not directly focused on Mr. Ford. But not any more.

The GOP challenger appears to be zeroing in on the President's alleged ineffectiveness overseas. Mr. Reagan hints that if present policies are continued, U.S. defenses will be weakened and the nation will be vulnerable to outside influences.

Among those who privately admit that this line of attack is inflammatory and will likely make intraparty conciliation virtually impossible after a Republican nominee is chosen are some Ford strategists.

And Mr. Reagan himself does little to reassure Republicans that such unity is on the horizon.

★Reagan steps up attack on Ford

Breakfasting with reporters, he stated (as he has in the past): "I support the party and its nominee." However, he quickly added that he also reserves "[his] right to hold on to positions which I am committed to" and not to support "positions where I don't agree."

"You don't water down principles," Mr. Reagan insisted.

Mr. Reagan further indicated that he would likely withhold "immediate" support for Mr. Ford should the President win the GOP nomination and he refused to spell out conditions which might woo him into the Ford corner.

Reagan strategists here say privately that the removal of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the acceptance of strong platform planks bolstering U.S. defenses abroad and against school busing and "other social experiments" at home might be minimal demands of Mr. Reagan and the Republican "right."

In answer to reporters' questions, Mr. Reagan made these points:

- He says that he can still score a first-ballot victory at the convention — if he wins 167 delegates in California's winner-take-all primary on June 8 and chunks of uncommitted state delegations from various conventions and caucuses. However, the Ford challenger fails to back up this claim with statistics. "I don't think we should reveal our game plan," he says.

- If nominated, he will choose a running mate "philosophically close to my views." Mr. Reagan said his vice-presidential choice would more likely come from the ranks of governors or ex-governors than from Congress. However, he wouldn't rule out U.S. Sen. Howard H. Baker, or William E. Brock, from Tennessee.
