CONCERT and DINNER

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE UNITED NATIONS ASSOCIATION OF THE U.S.A.

UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF THE PRESIDENT AND MRS. FORD

The world would be a far more fearful and fearsome place without the United Nations and its many specialized agencies and special programs. One of these specialized agencies is the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) which is being saluted at this year's UN Concert and Dinner. The work of FAO is absolutely essential in today's world.

The ability of the world to feed its billions of people is under unprecedented challenge. Starvation for millions is the prospect unless prompt, effective, and well-coordinated action is taken on a global scale.

All nations must seek to increase their food production, keep prices from rising beyond reach, and help assure that the poorest nations are fed.

The United States, as the world's largest producer of food, has a special responsibility. We have responded by removing restrictions on food production, substantially increasing the help we give to other countries to grow more food of their own, calling for a world food conference, and increasing this year the amount we will spend for food shipments to nations in need.

But the crisis is so grave and widespread that no single nation's efforts can suffice. The United Nations has an indispensable role to play, especially through the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization.

The FAO has distinguished itself by alerting the world to the need for adequate supplies of basic foods at all times. The FAO has coordinated UN emergency assistance to the stricken Sahel drought area and is planning its long-term rehabilitation. And the FAO is preparing the World Food Conference, about to be held in Rome in November. For the FAO's service to humanity, you and I and all the world must be grateful.

And the United Nations Association must also be thanked for tireless efforts to advance the work of the United Nations and its family of specialized agencies.

Gerald R. Ford

THE HOSTS

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Kissinger

The United States will never be satisfied with a world where man's fears overshadow his hopes. We support the United Nations efforts in the fields of international law and human rights. We approve of the activities of the United Nations in social, economic, and humanitarian realms around the world. The United States considers the United Nations World Population Conference in August, the World Food Conference in November, and the continuing Law of the Sea Conference of fundamental importance to our common future.

In coming months the United States will make specific proposals for the United Nations to initiate: A major international effort to prohibit torture; a concerted campaign to control the disease which afflicts and debilitates over 200 million people in 70 countries—schistosomiasis; and a substantial strengthening of the world's capacity to deal with natural disaster—especially the improvement of the United Nations Disaster Relief Organization.

Beyond peace, beyond prosperity, lie man's deepest aspirations for a life of dignity and justice. And beyond our pride, beyond our concern for the national purpose we are called upon to serve, there must be a concern for the betterment of the human condition. While we cannot, in the brief span allowed to each of us, undo the accumulated problems of centuries, we dare not do less than try. So let us now get on with our task.

and Mrs. Donald M. Kendall

SALUTING
THE FOOD AND AGRICULTURE ORGANIZATION

*Dr. Addeke Boerma
Director General,
Food and Agriculture Organization
of the United Nations*

The tribute accorded to the Food and Agriculture Organization by the United Nations Association of the United States could scarcely be more timely. Its significance extends far beyond the Organization itself, which for close on thirty years has endeavored to fulfill the mandate from its founding member nations at Quebec.

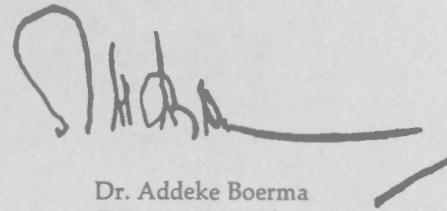

The goals set then—improved nutrition and greater efficiency of food production and distribution, coupled with better conditions of life for rural populations—have proved elusive. Despite man's tremendous achievement in maintaining since the Second World War an average annual increase in world food production greater than the unprecedented rate of population growth in these years, there are today, by the most conservative estimate, more than 460 million people in the world who are permanently hungry and who cannot therefore live a normal life. Moreover, there has been a tendency over more recent years for the rate of increase in world food production to slow down, and, in 1972, for the first time since the Second World War, it actually declined.

The shortages and threats of widespread famine in some parts of the world combined with the general rise in food prices prompted the governments of the world last year to convene a United Nations World Food Conference which will meet in Rome a little over two weeks from now. It will be the most important international conference on the world food problem since President Franklin D. Roosevelt convoked the Hot Springs Conference in 1943 which led to the founding of FAO. Apart from coming to grips with the dangers of the immediate situation, it will have to make plans for action to overcome more deep-rooted, long-term causes of anxiety. Chief among these is how production in the developing countries of the world can be increased fast enough to meet their continuing growth of population—which is already virtually determined for the rest of this century, together with their urgent general needs for economic and social development so that, among other things, the vast numbers of their poorest people may be freed at last from hunger and malnutrition.

The role of the United States Secretary of State in proposing that this conference be organized under United Nations auspices in order to harness the efforts of all nations gives us every reason to hope that the United States will continue to provide the kind of leadership which was instrumental in founding FAO, and which has frequently manifested itself in generous and large-scale action to relieve human suffering in various parts of the world.

I know that firm, continued support for FAO and the United Nations/FAO World Food Programme is a reflection of genuine concern among the American people for their fellow men. This support has been very often expressed in specific and collective ways by organizations such as UNA/USA. Like the other agencies within the United Nations system, FAO is deeply grateful for these efforts to increase awareness of global needs and foster international cooperation in this increasingly inter-dependent world.

Antal Dorati

Antal Dorati, Music Director of the National Symphony Orchestra since October 1970, was born in Budapest in 1906. He entered the Academy of Music at fourteen, a pupil of Zoltán Kodály, Bela Bartók and Leo Weiner. Trained as a composer, cellist, pianist, and conductor, when he graduated at eighteen, Dorati was the youngest student in the history of the Academy to receive a degree. In 1934, Dorati joined the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo as its leading conductor. His American debut as a symphonic conductor came in 1937 when he guest-conducted the National Symphony Orchestra for an all-Beethoven concert. In 1938 and 1939-40, he made extensive tours of Australia at the invitation of the Australian Broadcasting Commission. Dorati became Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony in 1949, programming and commissioning many new major works by Paul Hindemith, William Schuman, Roger Sessions and Gunther Schuller, among others. He also played numerous world and American premieres. He has been closely associated with the London Symphony Orchestra and the BBC Symphony, and in the autumn of 1966, Dorati took up his post as principal conductor of the Stockholm Philharmonic, a position that he maintained concurrently with the leadership of the National Symphony Orchestra until last summer. Then he became Music Director of the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in London. During the past several years, he was invited to guest conduct at the Vienna National Opera, London's Covent Garden, the Hamburg Opera, the Amsterdam Opera, the Rome Opera, and the Maggio Musicale in Florence. Dorati has won eight Grand Prix du Disque for his recordings. These include the first recording of the complete symphonies of Haydn for which he received the Grand Prix de L'Hotel de Ville de Paris.

Van Cliburn

Van Cliburn was born in Shreveport, Louisiana, and when he was six, the family moved to Kilgore, Texas. His mother, Rildia Bee O'Bryan Cliburn, was a talented pianist and a student of Arthur Friedheim, a pupil of Franz Liszt, and her son was able to reap the benefits of her years of practice and study, for at the age of three—long before he had learned to read words—she began to teach him to read music. She remained his only instructor until he came to New York City to study with Juilliard's legendary Mme. Rosina Lhevinne.

Van played first in public at the age of four at Shreveport's Dodd College. At the age of twelve, as winner of a state-wide young pianists' competition, he made his orchestral debut with the Houston Symphony playing the Tchaikovsky B-flat Minor Concerto. The following year, he made his Carnegie Hall debut as winner of the National Music Festival Award.

In 1952, he won the G. B. Dealey Award in Dallas, and with it an appearance with the Dallas Symphony. In the same year he won the Kosciuszko Foundation Chopin Award, followed by winning a grant from the Olga Samaroff Foundation and the Juilliard Concerto contest in 1953. Upon Juilliard graduation with highest honors, he received the Carl M. Roeder Memorial Award and the Frank Damrosch Scholarship, which enabled him to go on to graduate work.

In 1954 he won the Edgar M. Leventritt Foundation Award playing the Liszt Twelfth Rhapsody. This competition which is held annually gives the winner the privilege of playing with the New York Philharmonic in concert as well as four other major American orchestras, the Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Denver, and Buffalo Symphonies. His debut that same year playing the Tchaikovsky First Piano Concerto with the New York Philharmonic was a notable success.

Then came his victory at the Tchaikovsky Competition of 1958 in Moscow after which Premier Khrushchev asked him to play several concerts in the Soviet Union.

Cliburn returned to the Soviet Union in 1960 sponsored by the U.S. Department of State as part of the Cultural Exchange Program. He returned to the Soviet Union in 1962, again in 1965, and his last Russian tour was in 1972.

In the past two summers, he has made two tours in the Philippines at the request of President Marcos.

The Association also works through a network of local chapters and more than 150 affiliated national organizations, representing a total constituency of millions of Americans.

Through its National Policy Panels, UNA/USA brings together scholars, business and labor leaders, foundation officials and technical experts to apply creative thinking to perplexing international problems. These reports have helped to shape U.S. policy in a wide range of areas including arms control, U.S.-China relations, population, international communications, etc.

UNA/USA publishes a monthly periodical, The Inter Dependent, as well as fact sheets and educational materials on many specific UN activities.

UNA/USA is supported entirely by membership dues, contributions from individuals, foundations, business and labor organizations, and by income from its publications, conferences and special events.

EARL WARREN

Chief Justice of the United States
1953-1969

Chairman of the United Nations Association of the United States of America
1970-1974

Warren E. Burger
*Chief Justice
of the United States*

The remarkable lifetime of public service of Chief Justice Earl Warren, extending over a period of more than half a century, exemplified his dedication to the rule of law. It was inevitable that he would be a supporter of the United Nations concept, and it was only a coincidence that its organization meeting was held in his native State of California, enabling him to observe the efforts and achievements of the United Nations from its inception.

His world outlook was demonstrated in many ways. During his entire tenure as Chief Justice and during the five years of his life that followed, he was an inveterate world traveler and, as such, a unique goodwill representative of the United States. Although he did not ordinarily travel in a formal diplomatic capacity, his standing made him welcome everywhere, and he contributed much to friendly relations with other nations. It was logical, therefore, that his developing world outlook led to a keen interest in the work of the United Nations and his support of the United Nations Association for many years.

To other countries of the world—particularly the underdeveloped states and those which aspired to emulate our free institutions—Earl Warren was a symbol of the concept of the rule of law. His leadership and his influence will be sorely missed but his mark is indelible.

Arthur J. Goldberg
*Former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States
 Honorary Chairman of UNA/USA*

When Chief Justice Warren retired from the Supreme Court, it was most appropriate for him to assume the office of Chairman of the United Nations Association of the United States of America.

The retiring Chief Justice, in accepting the Association's invitation to be its Chairman, said that he was moving from one area dedicated to the rule of law to another devoted to the same principle.

Earl Warren believed that the effort to bring the rule of law to govern the relations between sovereign states—the central effort of the United Nations and its supportive association, UNA/USA—is of the highest priority.

These beliefs came naturally to him from a lifetime in the law and government.

Being a realist, Chief Justice Warren recognized that the rule of law among nations is obviously more difficult to achieve than here at home, but he likewise conceived that it is even more necessary. Earl Warren, therefore, was willing to lend his prestige and personal efforts to the extension of law into the international realm. This, he knew, was not going to be achieved in one great Utopian stroke of the pen. But he had faith in the United Nations Charter, just as he had abiding confidence in our Constitution.

His credo was akin to that of President Truman, who, on the closing day of the founding conference of the United Nations in San Francisco on June 26, 1945, spoke of the future of the new Charter of the United Nations in these words: "This Charter, like our own Constitution, will be expanded and improved as time goes on. It has not been poured into any fixed mold. Changing world conditions will require readjustments [in the interests] of peace and not of war."

It was also Earl Warren's conception that the United States, the principal architect of the United Nations and the leading power in the world, has the primary responsibility to support and sustain the United Nations. In answer to critics, he was prone to reply in the words of Adlai Stevenson, "Let none of us mock its weaknesses, for when we do, we are mocking ourselves."

From the richness of his experience and total commitment to peace and the rule of law, Chief Justice Warren recognized that our nation derives its great influence in the world not only from great physical power but also from the fact that our basic law and our national outlook are premised on the equality and dignity of all persons.

In his leadership of the United Nations Association of the United States, he urged that the way to peace in this turbulent age is to keep to that national vision; to work with all our might for the establishment of a structure of law that will be equitable and just to all nations and peoples. He knew full well that the law alone cannot assure world peace but that there can be no peace without it, and he devoted his great talents and energy in the light of that truth.

The members of the United Nations Association mourn the passing of this great American and great citizen of the world.
