MEMORANDUM FOR LIEUTENANT GENERAL BRENT SCOWCROFT
THE WHITE HOUSE

Subject: Waivers for Admission of Refugees

The information below is submitted in response to your memorandum of today on the above subject:

Following the suppression of the abortive Hungarian revolt in the Fall of 1956 over 200,000 Hungarian refugees fled the country, especially to Austria (180,000) and to Yugoslavia (20,000). Resettlement missions from many countries were eager to accept Hungarian refugees, and the asylum countries -- especially Austria -- served as staging areas. President Eisenhower and the American people in general were eager to accept a generous quota of the Hungarians. Fewer than 7,000 refugee visas remained available, however, under the Refugee Relief Act of 1953 as amended. These were quickly used for Hungarians. At this juncture the decision was made to invoke Section 212 (d) (5) of the Immigration and Nationality Act in order to parole larger numbers of Hungarian refugees into the United States.

Section 212 (d) (5) provides inter alia that "The Attorney General may in his discretion parole into the United States temporarily under such conditions as he may prescribe for emergent reasons or for reasons deemed strictly in the public interest any alien applying for admission to the United States"

The sympathetic 85th Congress enacted P.L. 85-559, which provides for adjustment of status of paroled Hungarians to that of permanent immigrants to the U.S. The majority of the refugees were brought in from Austria into a U.S. staging area, in Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, administered by the Department of the Army. The refugees were resettled from Camp Kilmer, primarily through the efforts of interested voluntary agencies. A total of 30,701 Hungarian refugees regularized their status in the United States under P.L. 85-559 during 1958-59. This represented the overwhelming majority of the Hungarian refugees who were paroled into this country.

The Cuban refugee situation differs from others in that the United States was the country of first asylum. From 1957-72 this country admitted 621,403 Cuban nationals who fled from Cuba. That exodus was generally divided into three distinct periods: from the advent of the Castro government in 1959 to the breaking of diplomatic relations in January, 1961; from 1961 until the end of commercial travel in October, 1962; the subsequent period. While diplomatic relations existed, Cubans who wanted to leave Cuba went to the consulate in Havana. They were issued B-2 (tourist visas) which documented them and enabled commercial carriers to bring them to the United States. On arrival (usually Miami) the B-2 visa was cancelled by the Immigration Service (INS) and they were paroled into the United States under the parole provisions of the Immigration Act. The B-2 visa was "pro-forma" documentation to enable travel to commence.

After the break in diplomatic relations, the United States initially avoided the use of parole for Cubans fleeing the island and resorted to the device of waiving the visa requirement on a mass basis on the theory that each case represented an unforeseen emergency because of the unavailability of consular services in Cuba. This program largely terminated at the time of the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1962 because travel out of Cuba became impossible.

In October 1962, all commercial transportation between Cuba and the U.S. ended. The Cuban refugee flow was reduced to a trickle. In December 1962 the American Red Cross began sponsoring airflights and vessels which brought Cuban refugees to the United States, primarily relatives of Cubans already here and prisoners from the "Bay of Pigs" invasion. These people were directly paroled.

In 1965, Castro announced that certain Cubans who wanted to leave were free to do so. President Johnson responded that the U.S. would accept all. Direct parole was the method of entry. Some Cubans went to third countries (primarily Spain) as they were unable to get places on the airlifts. Those with close relatives in the U.S. were given "pre-parole" documentation (medicals, affidavit of support, security clearance) by our consulate in Madrid. When they arrived at the U.S. port of entry, they were paroled into the U.S. by INS. In October, 1973, the Attorney General agreed to a one year parole program for those without close relatives here. Documentation was prepared by the consulates as with the pre-parole program, but INS personnel interviewed and issued the actual parole document in Madrid. Cubans in the U.S. were received and processed by the Cuban Refugee Center in Miami run by HEW. The Act of November 2, 1966 enabled Cuban refugees to adjust status to permanent residents.

Other examples, such as the parole of Soviet Jews from Rome, can be cited if these are desired.
