MISSISSIPPI

Entered Union in 1817 ... 20th state.
Capital: Jackson
Nickname: "Magnolia State"
Motto: Virtute et Armis (by Valor and Arms)
State Flower: Magnolia
State Tree: Magnolia
State Bird: Mockingbird
Area: 47,716 square miles ... 32nd in size.
Population: 2,216,912 (1970 census) ... rank 29th.
Name is probably Chippewa; "mici," large, "zibi," river ... was spelled later "Michi Sepe"

Mississippi's economy was long based on cotton, but has now become balanced and diversified, thanks to promotion of industry, varied crops, tourism and Federal agency installations. The land slopes from the northeast hills to the Delta, a cotton-producing alluvial plain in the west and northwest lying between the Yazoo River and the Mississippi, which flows along the state's western border. The land also slopes to the south where the beaches on the Gulf of Mexico have created a popular vacation area.

Soybeans have taken over as Mississippi's largest crop, although the state ranks second only to Texas in cotton production. Other important farm products include pecans, sweet potatoes, rice, sugarcane syrup, and eggs. Farm receipts totaled $1.1 billion in 1972. Value of the Commercial fishing catch is more than $11 million a year.

With more than 50 percent of the land classified as forest, timber products yielded over $1 billion in 1972. The state produces the hardwood pulpwood, hardwood lumber, fiberboard, and news-print. Petroleum production was valued at $192,938,000 for 1972; natural gas output was valued $24,242,000; total value of mineral production was estimated at $255,716,000. A $250 million NASA space installation is used as a Center for International Earth Sciences by NOAA and NASA.

HISTORY

The principal Indian tribes living in Mississippi when Europeans came were the Chickasaws, the Choctaws, and the Natchez. At first, the white men were most interested in trade and in converting the Indians to Christianity. Hernando de Soto led the important Spanish expedition in 1540. The Spanish defeated the Indians and moved westward to discover the Mississippi River, but they lost interest in the area after failing to find gold or other precious metals.

More than 100 years later, explorers went down the Mississippi River from the French colony in Canada. In 1682 LaSalle explored the area, as did other French explorers. Continued difficulties with the Indians made the colony unprofitable. When the English won the French and Indian War (1754-63), the French were forced to cede all their territorial claims east of the Mississippi River, except New Orleans, to the British.

The southern boundary of Mississippi was fixed at the end of the Revolutionary War, but Spain did not recognize it until the Treaty of San Lorenzo in 1795. The United States set up a territorial government with Winthrop Sargent as governor and Natchez as the first capital. In 1802 the capital was moved to Washington, a small town nearby, which remained the seat of government throughout the territorial period. An important event of that time was the Yazoo land fraud by which the Georgia legislature in 1795 sold to speculators most of the land now making up the state of Mississippi. In 1802 Georgia ceded the land to the Federal Government. Troubles with the Indians increased during the War of 1812 and Gen. Andrew Jackson defeated them in the Creek War. By the Treaty of Fort Jackson in 1814, the Indians were forced to cede valuable lands to settlement and the population increased rapidly. Congress divided the territory to make the states of Mississippi and Alabama.

David Holmes became the first governor of the new state of Mississippi. In 1822, a new capital was named for Andrew Jackson. The United States signed several treaties with the Indians and subsequent periods of development brought prosperity. The settlement of new lands and the growing demand for cotton made that crop the most important factor in the state's economy. Negro slaves were brought in to produce the cotton, and by 1840 they outnumbered whites.

The period between 1850 and 1860 was marked by intensive discussion of the slavery question. Mississippians united in support of slavery and of its extension into the territories. After Lincoln's election, Mississippi took immediate steps to withdraw from the Union and was the second state to do so. Jefferson Davis, one of the state's most distinguished citizens, became the president of the Confederate States of America. During the Civil War, the most important campaign was the fight for Vicksburg, which was captured in 1863. The war ended in Mississippi when Gen. Richard Taylor surrendered his command in 1865.

In the summer of 1865 a convention met to change the constitution. In 1869 after meeting all the requirements of the Reconstruction Act, the state was re-admitted to the Union. From 1870 to 1875, it was under the rule of the "carpetbaggers" and "scalawags." By 1875 the Democrats had reorganized and were able to win control of the state legislature. A constitutional convention drew up a new constitution which insured control of the state by whites.

Mississippi was the last state to end prohibition, in 1966, adopting a local-option liquor law. A "New Democratic Party" was organized in 1964, challenging the seating of the Mississippi delegation in the Democratic national convention. It staged an election in which registered Negroes expressed their preference for the Democratic candidate for president. The enactment of the Civil Rights Law of 1964 increased tension but was followed by what appeared to be a strong movement for acceptance of its provisions. In 1966 James H. Meredith, who in 1962 became the first black to be admitted to the University of Mississippi (under a Federal court order and the protection of U.S. marshals) started to walk from Memphis, Tenn. to Jackson, Miss. with the aim of encouraging blacks to overcome their fears and register to vote. In 1967 a black was elected to the state legislature for the first time since 1890.

Famous Mississippians include William Faulkner, Tennessee Williams, Elvis Presly, Lcontyne Price, Bobby Gentry and Lucius Lamar. (Not excluding, of course, your Assistant Press Secretary, Larry Speakes.)

CAMPAIGN PROFILE

MISSISSIPPI

BACKGROUND INFORMATION FROM REP. TRENT LOTT
(Prepared By The Congressional Liaison Office)

Lott believes Mississippi is now extremely fertile ground to pick up significant delegate support for the GOP convention. Even before the Reagan announcement of Schweiker as his Vice Presidential running mate, Mississippi agreed with and has strongly supported you on many of your positions.

Trent said that he has never publicly committed himself to Reagan or Ford. He is now willing to show his support for you by going with you to Mississippi. Lott believes you should emphasize to the Mississippi GOP delegation and the State news media:

- 1) Your strong interest in the problems and accomplishments in the South.
- 2) That you will personally work hard to gain the support of the South in the November election.
- 3) That you will select a Vice Presidential running mate who will be acceptable to the South and who will work hard in the South during the fall campaign (recommends that you not make any Vice Presidential commitment prior to the National Convention.)

MISSISSIPPI

BACKGROUND INFORMATION FROM REP. THAD COCHRAN (Prepared By The Congressional Liaison Office)

Cochran urges you to go to Mississippi. He also said he will be more than happy to accompany you and to take appropriate action during any meetings which might be planned.

He suggests you may wish to remind Mississippians than you visited the State as Vice President, and that you recall memorable events during that visit.

Cochran has been impressed by Congressman Ron Sarasin's report of your remarks to the Connecticut State GOP Convention. He suggests this same approach be made in Mississippi.

Vice Presidential Running Mate

Cochran recommends that you state that Mississippi, as well as the rest of the nation, can be assured that you will not select an "extremist" as your Presidential running mate. (But you should not commit to anyone your Vice Presidential running mate before the GOP Convention.)

He reminds you that Vice President Rockefeller is unpopular in Mississippi.

Secretary Kissinger

The name of Henry Kissinger is still a "red flag" in Mississippi, Cochran reports.

If you are asked about Henry Kissinger, Cochran suggests the following response:

"When I took over as President there was considerable apprehension that there would be great turmoil in the direction of American foreign policy. I, therefore, felt that it was best that we continue the basic approach already in place. I will not apologize for retaining Secretary Of State Kissinger. In retrospect, I am confident this was the correct decision."

ISSUES AND GUIDANCE

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

July 28, 1976

MEMORANDUM FOR: JIM SHUMAN FROM: RAY HANZLIK RH
SUBJECT: Mississippi Issues

The following are our issues for Mississippi based on discussions with former Governor Waller and several state and local officials.

1. General Background:

Mississippi is a rural, agricultural state, with the lowest per capita income in the Nation. The dominating issue in the State is economic development. There is strong awareness of the economic disparity between Mississippi and the rest of the country, resulting in an attitude of determination in the State to accelerate its economic growth and upgrade the level of income. These existing economic conditions are primarily the result of the heavy emphasis on raw agricultural commodities and little production of finished, manufactured goods. Efforts are now focused on developing a more balanced State economy. These concerns seem to color the views on most other issues.

2. Agricultural Policy

In the agricultural sector, the approach now is to continue to maintain high production with wider sales efforts, especially in the international market. Soybeans are a major export crop, and no recent issue aroused greater negative response among the farmers than the soybean embargo. The Mississippi farmer wants a minimum of Federal intervention in the agricultural export program, and the President should indicate his commitment to support the farmer on this issue.

3. Pascagoula Navy Shipyards

The Nation's most modern shipyard is in Pascagoula, Mississippi, where the assembly-line system for the production of naval ships was introduced. This shipyard is the largest industrial employer in the State, and the people of Mississippi take great pride in this facility.

There is currently litigation between the Navy and Litton Industries over payment for design changes on ships under construction at the shipyard, which has generated some concern over Litton's ability to stay in business.

The President should give recognition to the shipyard as a solid example and promising sign of industrial development in Mississippi.

4. Natchez-Trace Parkway

The Natchez-Trace Parkway is a 400 mile scenic road between Nashville, Tennessee and Natchez, Mississippi that has been under construction for over 40 years by the Department of Interior. There is strong interest within the State to see this project completed because of the tourism value and construction jobs the project provides. There are still a number of unfinished portions in the Parkway, one between Jackson and Clinton, where the President will visit. Some believe that no single gesture would have greater favorable political impact for the President throughout the State than for him to make a commitment to promptly complete the Parkway. It is estimated that the project can be completed in five years for a total cost of $150 million.

5. Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway

This is a north/south waterway between Mobile, Alabama and the Tennessee River which goes through the upper half of Mississippi. The project was approved by the Nixon Administration and is being constructed by the Army Corps of Engineers. Construction is underway in the Alabama section with the Mississippi phase to begin in the near future.

This is a popular project in Mississippi for which the Administration has never received full credit.

6. Beef Import Policy

The Mississippi Cattlemen's Association is asking Presidential assistance on a beef import problem that they believe is undermining their industry. Australian and New Zealand beef is being processed through a free trade zone in Puerto Rico and shipped to the United States, circumventing the import quotas assigned to the countries of origin. The cattlemen want an Executive Order by the President that would give the Department of Agriculture authority to renegotiate the import quotas, thereby correcting this abuse.

7. Banker's Trust Default

The largest independent savings and loan company in Mississippi, with $245 million in holdings (primarily from small investors) and uninsured by the Federal Government, recently went under and is now in receivership. The Ford Administration (through Secretary Simon) promptly moved in to stop this tide from impacting on other uninsured banks in the State. Many small investors, which number in the thousands, are deeply indebted to the President's prompt assistance. The President might indicate his commitment to continue to help protect the small investor in Mississippi.

8. Municipal Officials' Concerns

Mayor Whitaker of Tupelo - one of 16 Republican Mayors in Mississippi and active in state-wide municipal affairs - stated that fiscal stability is the Number One problem facing local governments in the State. There is very strong support among the Mayors for General Revenue Sharing, which many would like to see expanded. (Mayor Whitaker plans to give the President a paper on this subject during the Friday visit). The Mayors feel that their money has been wasted in grantsmanship and want more simplicity in the Federal assistance programs.

Most Mayors supported the President's veto of the Public Works bill, although now that it is law, they will not hesitate to get their fair share of its assistance.
